Peer Tutoring...

Does your school, or any of the teachers in your school use Peer Tutoring as a teaching pedagogy?

Maybe you have used it in the past? Maybe you would like to use it in future?

If so I would really appreciate to hear from schools as I am interested in this pedagogy for research purposes. I am currently studying at the University of Sheffield on the MSc Psychology and Education conversion course.

Junior Memory Championship

sponsored by the Learning Skills Foundation®

“The science of memory is key to helping students learn”

Catharine Young, Neuroscientist and Senior Advisor for Science and Innovation at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office

The Guardian Dec 2015

“Memory is the first stage of learning. Good luck with the championship this year”

Professor Sue Gathercole OBE, Cognitive Psychologist specialising in Memory, Learning and Language, Director of MRC Cognition and Brain Sciences Unit, University of Cambridge

Dear Teacher

This year, we celebrated the 10th Anniversary of the Junior Memory Championship and launched the Asian Junior Memory Championship in Singapore (see www.juniormemorychampionship.com for details).

Registration for the 11th UK Junior Memory Championship 2018/19 is now open.

The purpose of the Junior Memory Championship is to equip children with valuable and effective memory skills helping them achieve their very best results in SATs and other end-of-year tests. The memory skills show your children how much they can improve their learning – when they know how. Through the JMC we've seen the impact of memory training for a decade now. Each year between 20,000 and 25,000 children participate becoming more confident and successful learners. The real value in the JMC is in the training materials for you to teach your children. As an added incentive, we also run an online competition which is not compulsory but there for those children who enjoy a bit of competition!

“All the children made at least four average point score (APS) progress, while 80% of them made more than four APS progress and that is across reading, writing and maths”

Ashley Winters, Headteacher Brownmead Academy

Need resources and ideas for including LGBTQ in the curriculum?

Want to help tackle homophobic, biphobic and transphobic bullying in school?

Want to be upskilled in supporting LGBTQ pupils?

Work in a school?

Free, funded training available!

The Barnardo's Anti-Homophobic, Biphobic and Transphobic Bullying programme are offering schools the chance to access free staff training to support the school in:

- 1. Challenging discrimination and prejudice targeted at people because of their gender and/or sexual identity or perceived identity.
- 2. Creating visibly safe and inclusive school environments where all pupils feel they can be proud of who they are.
- 3. Ensuring staff are confident in having conversations around gender and sexual identity and including diverse identities in the curriculum.

There are various different elements of the programme; however the minimum commitment we would ask from schools is 3 hours of staff training (this can potentially be split into two sessions to be flexible to training timetables).

To apply, please complete our short survey - this will take no longer than 5 minutes!
